

HAYNES PLANS TO MAKE AMERICA A LITERAL 'SAHARA'

Dry Commissioner Will Center
Responsibility in State
Directors.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Ray Haynes, prohibition commissioner after a month in office, prophesied today that the United States would be a literal Sahara under a plan he has evolved to center all responsibility for enforcement in state directors. Commissioner Haynes admitted that the task before him is a "whale of a job," but he believes he is equal to it, and through greater efficiency he predicted all liquor trucks will be closed and that public sentiment will become more strongly crystallized in favor of rigid enforcement.

Reminded of the prediction of his predecessor that the United States would not be dry for 100 years, Haynes said that in the future, enforcement work will not be characterized by the progress made in the first year. By banishing politics from his organization Haynes hopes to inject efficiency.

He is determined to clear the air of this difficulty by filling vacancies at once, so that enforcement work in all states can go ahead.

"Good men will fill these jobs, whether democrat or republican," said Haynes. "Some of the crack-jacks of the organization are democrats. These men will not be replaced merely to give the jobs to republicans. Our preference is for republicans when other things are equal. But efficiency is my motto and efficiency must be established, to bring order out of chaos."

Commissioner Haynes said that the principal handicap is inadequate funds to check liquor violators.
